DSIGNINC MILANO

Domenico Iovine and Vincenzo Sabatino founded DSIGNINC in 2010, after having developed their careers in the architecture, design and fashion fields. An architect and an interior designer, mostly dealing with exhibitions and setups in general, who don't abandon their personal thought about architecture. In opposition to the latest tendencies, they pay a lot of attention to the relationship between content and container: a good architecture can't be separated from a fusion of these two aspects. Their style is a mix of different eras, for an eclectic and unique result.

The Corso Italia series of wall lamps embodies DSGNINC's experimental approach, as the designers explore the potential of light through innovative materials and forms.

Featuring a structure composed of asymmetrically intersecting glass and metal plates, Corso Italia is distinguished by its dynamic visual presence and ability to modulate light in a striking, sculptural way, playing with transparency and reflection, creating an illuminating effect that enriches spaces with a subtle yet impactful elegance.

The rough effect on the metallic plates and brass accents gives Corso Italia a natural unpredictability and adds uniqueness to each piece.
